

Remote Desktop Connection (Windows)	Remote Desktop Connection (Leaf OS)
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Third-party applications also exist to enable cross-platform connections.</li> <li>• RDC provides features like remote access to files and applications, multi-monitor support, clipboard sharing between local and remote systems</li> <li>• The performance of RDC largely depends on the quality of the network connection.</li> <li>• They both are equally secure</li> <li>• RDC can be used to access Windows servers and desktops from other Windows devices</li> <li>• RDC provides a full graphical user interface (GUI) experience</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Leaf OS support connections from other operating systems or devices.</li> <li>• The remote desktop feature in "Leaf OS" include features like remote file access, application usage, and resource sharing</li> <li>• The performance of remote connections in Leaf OS would be influenced by factors such as network quality and the capabilities of the underlying hardware</li> <li>• They both are equally secure</li> <li>• its remote desktop connection would likely allow users to connect to and control devices running "Leaf OS"</li> <li>• The features of remote desktop connection in "Leaf OS" would depend on the capabilities and design choices of the operating system</li> </ul>